

The Solo Founder's Systems Kit

Working alone means you are the whole company. Systems - not willpower - keep you shipping. This kit gives you the minimum viable operating stack.

1. The weekly operating loop

Run a simple loop: Plan (top 3 outcomes) -> Build -> Ship -> Measure -> Review. Use one sheet with columns Goal, This-week action, Done?, Metric. Every Friday, 15 minutes: what shipped, what did not, why, and the top 3 for next week. Systems beat motivation because they do not depend on mood. A founder without a loop drifts; a founder with one compounds.

2. Money tracker (minimum viable)

One table: Date, Source, Amount (USD), Crypto?, TxID, Paid?. Reconcile weekly. Below ~$5k/month you do not need accounting software. For crypto income, record the wallet address and transaction ID so you can prove payment without a bank. The Para-Inc store accepts BTC/ETH/USDT and a monitor checks the chain automatically, so this column fills itself.

3. Inbox and CRM in 30 lines

Use a Google Sheet as your CRM: Name, Email, Stage, Last contact, Next action. A tiny n8n workflow logs every new lead and reminds you after 48 hours. The rule that matters: no lead sits more than two days without a touch. Most solo founders lose deals to silence, not to competition. A 30-line workflow fixes that permanently.

4. A content system that actually runs

Pick ONE channel. Post three times a week: one teaching, one proof (a result or screenshot), one offer. Repurpose one long piece into five shorts. Consistency beats production value for the first 90 days - nobody remembers your lighting, they remember you showed up. Batch-create a month of posts in one afternoon using the prompt pack.

5. Burnout guardrails

Block deep-work mornings with notifications off. One no-screen evening a week. Ship smaller and ship often - a 1-hour deliverable that is live beats a perfect one still in draft. The only real failure mode for a solo founder is quitting; systems keep you in the game long enough for compounding to show.
